Abstract: Please join us for a special webinar on Recovering America's Wildlife Act. You will learn how this bill might impact your state and help reverse America's Wildlife Crisis. More than a third of America's wildlife is at risk of extinction with even once common species now in steep decline. An exciting bipartisan bill in the U.S. Congress is making headway and will address this crisis by providing $1.4 billion to states and tribes focused on preventing wildlife from becoming endangered. This investment could help any natural areas program tap into stewardship, acquisition, monitoring, research and survey work on species and habitat restoration as well as associated education and recreation to get more kids and adults outdoors. Naomi Edelson, Senior Director for Wildlife Partnerships with the National Wildlife Federation, and the campaign manager for Recovering America's Wildlife Act, will share about the wildlife crisis, the solution, and how you can help.

Recovering America's Wildlife Act

Naomi is a passionate, inspirational leader in the wildlife conservation community. She is an innovator creating new teams, tools and expert guidance. Her leadership involves convening a diversity of interests and building movements for birds to butterflies. She is leading NWF's campaign to secure greater funding to prevent wildlife from becoming endangered and overall partnerships with state wildlife agencies. This includes legislative, communications, grassroots, and coalition building elements of the campaign. Naomi has developed a toolkit for wildlife leaders on "Strengthening State Wildlife Agencies" which includes securing state-level funding for wildlife with numerous tips, tools, and case studies available. She also works with NWF's Gardening for Wildlife program (www.nwf.org/garden) to restore wildlife habitat where people live, work, play, learn and worship including creation of the Native Plant Finder and Sacred Grounds, a program for faith communities.
