

Sarah Wurzbacher

Forestry Extension Education, Penn State Extension

Sarah Wurzbacher is a Penn State Forestry Extension Educator based in Williamsport, PA, who holds degrees in environmental science (ecology focus) and forestry. Sarah's forestry work has been in a variety of ecological systems nationally and internationally, but she is most at home in the forests of Pennsylvania's Allegheny Plateau and Ridge and Valley regions. Her current work focuses on Pennsylvania forest management issues, especially regeneration silviculture, forest health, landscape-scale successional diversification, wildlife habitat enhancement, incentivizing good stewardship and creative silviculture, increasing utilization of low-value wood, proactively managing invasive plant and insect threats, and increasing diverse participation in natural resource professions.
